

Functional Communities

Department of Defense Instruction (DoDI) 1400.25, Volume 250, dated June 7, 2016 defines a Functional Community as:

“A group of one or more occupational series or specialties with common functions, competencies, and career paths to accomplish a specific part of the DoD mission. Functional communities engage in workforce planning to ensure mission accomplishment by preparing for emerging missions and changing work requirements; developing competency models, assessing workforce competencies, and identifying mission-critical workforce gaps; identifying recruitment, development, and retention strategies to fill workforce gaps; providing career roadmaps with a “line of sight” for employee career development; and advocating individual competency assessments and development plans to help employees progress and meet professional standards.”

The matrix below lists DoD’s 22 Functional Communities and the occupational series assigned to each community. Future DoD employees in occupational series not included on this list will be added to the Miscellaneous Occupational Series until an appropriate Functional Community is determined.

Note: Mission Critical Occupations are in bold text.
